North Hertfordshire College collects personal data and information about all our staff and learners. We do this in order to fulfil our statutory powers to provide education and training services to you, to ensure the safety and welfare of our students and staff, to carry out our employment obligations, or to meet statutory and regulatory reporting requirements.

Personal data includes obvious things such as your name, age, gender, address and other contact details, and information about your previous education and learning, but it also covers information such as CCTV images or biometric data.

Some of your personal data is defined as 'special category' or 'sensitive'. This covers data about your health, race and ethnicity, politics, sexuality, trade union membership or religion. This information is kept more securely and is only available if people need to know about it – for example, to protect your health and wellbeing.

In general, we do not need your consent to process your personal data, as we cannot fulfil our 'Public Task' to provide education and training using statutory powers or meet our statutory obligations to protect your health and wellbeing without doing so.

Where consent is needed, for example, in relation to the processing of some photographic images, any consent you give may be withdrawn at any time by contacting the data team: enrol@nhc.ac.uk.

More information about we hold, protect and use your personal data can be found in our Privacy Notice on the college website: <https://www.nhc.ac.uk/engage/how-we-use-your-personal-data/>
